

FORMATION OF PLAYERS' CLUB IS DISCUSSED

Council Considered Question At Meeting Last Night

APPOINTMENTS

Letter Received From Miss Hurlbatt Congratulating Rugby Team

That definite steps will be taken towards forming a Players' Club at McGill is assured, according to plans which were formulated at a meeting of the Students' Council last night. It was unanimously agreed among the members that such an organization is highly desirable and that it would fill a gap that should not exist in student activities. In the discussion on the subject it was emphasized that even if the Players' Club were not very active this session the fact that it had been organized and placed on a working basis would contribute a great deal towards its success in future years. A meeting of all students interested in athletics is called for next Monday at 5:00 p. m. Tentative plans will then be subject to revision at the discretion of the assembly and an executive will probably be elected.

The portrait painting of Sir William Macdonald and Sir William Peterson which now hangs in the Union Ballroom will be unveiled at a date yet to be decided under the auspices of the Canadian Club. This painting which is now one of the most valuable assets of the Union, is a gift to the University of Professor Nobbs and Mr. George Roberts. It is planned to have a prominent speaker in the person of Professor Colby give the address at the function, and an invitation is being extended to Mr. Stewart of the Macdonald Tobacco Company to officiate at the unveiling.

In the correspondence to the council was an invitation from the Hart House Committee to send a McGill representative to the fifth annual masquerade ball to be held on Nov. 21. The invitation was accepted and Selby Cope of Science was appointed to go to Toronto.

A communication from Miss Hurlbatt, Warden of the R. V. C., who is about to sail from Quebec on the "Ausonia" follows Nov. 15, 1924.

"I have just received a telegram from the Students of the R. V. C. with the great news of McGill's victory and have sent telegram of congratulations to add to the many that McGill and especially the football team will be receiving. This note goes as I leave Quebec—in case the telegram goes astray."

"Arsen my heartiest congratulations." Yours sincerely, Ethel Hurlbatt.

A request was received by the Council from the class of Science '27, for permission to hold an informal dance in the Union on December 31. This request will be granted on condition that the class makes satisfactory arrangements with the Union House Executive.

H. D. MacMillan was appointed vice-president of the Students' Council.

Several items on the agenda of business were tabled for further consideration.

Mrs. Cutie: "Jack wants me to learn all the traffic rules, but I think that would be foolish."

Mrs. Shaple: "Why foolish?"

Mrs. Cutie: "Why, it's much easier to let the officers explain them to you."

Irate Wife: "Who is that down there?"

Inebriated Huiy (who had just stumbled over the first step): "If shish ish my house, ish a burglar—ah! if shish ish my house, ish me!"

CLASSICAL CLUB MET LAST NIGHT

Splendid Address by Professor Macnaughton of 'Varsity

HARRY'S POEM

Sight of Former Professor Inspired Praise of Classics

"To gain a real appreciation of literature you must read the classics of Greece and Rome—but first of all know your Latin and Greek Grammar well. Here you will find the present source of all high thought in the world. From these come our modern religious philosophy, physics, and geometry, among many other things. These are of greater value than all our so-called Political Science and 'plumbing' ideas of efficiency." These are some of the ideas which Professor John Macnaughton gave to the members of the Classical Club in his spirited talk on the classics of Greece, Rome, and Israel. In his own inimitable manner he kept his hearers in a sort of trance. This opening meeting of the classical club was held last night in the Edinburgh Cafe, when Dr. Macnaughton of Toronto University spoke on "The Old World in the New." Dr. Macnaughton, as one of the later speakers put it, is a versatile man in every way. He was professor of Classics at Queens for some years, then came to McGill, and from here went to Toronto. Dr. Macnaughton spoke of the decline in the study of Latin and Greek in our modern world with its Political Science, its desire for efficiency, and all the science which he sums up in one satirical word "plumbing."

He spoke of the good old days at Queens "when one man only lectured in Political Science, three hours a week, and swept out the library besides." Then he mentioned some of the things we owe to Greece, for example: Newton's Law of Gravitation, Euclid's Geometry, the Law formed by "that man who jumped out of his bath and cried 'Eureka! Eureka!'" As illustrations of the sublime things in life he quoted dramatically the famous speech of Amos on "He who made the seven stars of Orion," and Micah's declaration to "Go justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God," and a famous passage from Oedipus. His final word was to "learn your Grammar well!"

Afterwards, Dr. Macnaughton was constrained upon to read a poem written by Harry of the Arts Building, which was inspired several days ago by the sight of Dr. Macnaughton walking through the hall of the Arts Building. He read it with great emphasis, and paused several times to enlarge upon some of the thoughts in the poem. He was heard to say something about preparing to be a doorkeeper in the house of the Lord than to dwell in the tabernacles of luxury. The poem is worth repeating here:

"Professor of Classics, gently adieu! May Providence ever watch over you, Prolong your life to teach the Race Classics, which as Education is the saying grace."

Through the Classics we may live in the Past; Standardize Education. Education would deteriorate fast, But the lessons from the Classics are ever new, Shining brightly the centuries through."

Afterwards, Dr. Abbot Smith and several other prominent members of the club spoke words of appreciation for the way in which Professor Macnaughton had inspired them anew with love classical literature.

The Classical Club was formed several years ago by Dean Laing, and while not strictly a McGill organization it is closely connected with the University. Professor W. D. Woodhead of the Department of Classics is the President this year. There are over 60 members in the club at present.

While in China Professor S. F. Light, formerly of the department of zoology in the University of the Philippines, and for the last two years in the University of Amoy, China, made the discovery of the existence of amphibious fish near Amoy. "Amphiox" have been rare, and difficult to obtain in large numbers," stated Professor Light, "but this supply is practically inexhaustible. More than a billion are taken each year. In Amoy, the Chinese use this little animal for food, both fresh and dried."

"It is strange that the animals are found only in one area. The Chinese give us a reason for this. A queer story concerning the crocodile on which the Chinese god of literature always rode. This crocodile died and its body was washed ashore in this region, where it is now represented by an island. The Chinese claim that the amphibiox are merely the maggots creeping out from the carcass of the crocodile's body."

OLD SCOUTS GATHER FOR ORGANIZATION

All those who have been interested in Boy Scout work in the past or who are present connected with the Scouts will gather at a meeting of the Old Scouts Club, to be held in Room B, Strathcona Hall this afternoon at five o'clock. This club is an organization instituted for the purpose of bringing together all those interested in Scout activities that they may discuss the Scout movement and offer criticisms and suggestions for the carrying on of this work, while it is of course also valuable for social purposes.

Last year, for various reasons and causes, the club was not very successful and at to-day's meeting the question will be discussed whether there are enough interested in the club to make it worth while to carry on.

UNIVERSITY SETTLEMENT "OPEN DAY"

Many Ladies Inspected The Institution

FINE DISPLAY

Children Gave Demonstration Of Their Work To Visitors

The University Settlement held an "Open Day" yesterday under the auspices of the McGill Women's Union. These days are being held from time to time throughout the year in order to give the ladies of the different faculties at McGill a chance to see the work that is being done by this admirable institution.

Yesterday ten was served by the Medical Faculty, and quite a number of ladies were present to see the children. The Settlement, which is situated 179 Dorchester St. west, is a home and recreation centre for all the small children in the neighbourhood. There is a library and a gymnasium, while classes are held in the institution for the purpose of instructing the children in various ways kinds of work in which they do not receive tuition at school.

Many of the boys and girls who live in that district come to the Settlement and the staff are finding it very difficult to look after them all. The house though fairly large and capacious, is not nearly large enough to accommodate everybody, and this is very difficult for those in charge to run the Settlement satisfactorily.

It was interesting and instructive to meet four times yearly in the Edinburgh Cafe for supper, and to hear address afterwards by some prominent men. Carleton Stapley and Mr. Woodley will speak at later meetings.

THE FRESHMAN ISSUE

The freshman issue of the Daily will appear tomorrow. All articles, poems and original contributions should be handed in as early in the evening as possible. It is expected that students not on the staff will contribute to this issue.

WOMEN ARE WEAKER THAN MALE RIVALS

Decision Reached in French Debate Yesterday

LARGE GATHERING

Societe Francaise and Cercle Francais Held Joint Meeting

The joint meeting of the Societe Francaise and the Cercle Francais which took place yesterday evening, was one of the most satisfactory that has been held for some time. Nearly 150 members of the two clubs were present and much interest was shown in the debate which took place.

The subject of this debate was "Resolved that man and not women is the stronger sex." There were three speakers on each side. Miss Carl, Miss Ratner and Miss Perrin, three R. V. C. students spoke for the affirmative; while Wilson, Gomboury and Gauthier upheld the negative side of the case.

After a very interesting and closely-contested debate, the judges decided that the men had proved themselves slightly superior in their arguments to their female opponents, and they were awarded the victory. However, it must not be thought that the representatives of the Societe Francaise were badly defeated, as they held their own very well in the contest, and all three of them showed themselves very able debaters.

All the speeches made by the girls were of serious nature. They declared that women were far superior to men from the point of view of mind and intellect, and that they have a better insight into things than men have, as well as being able to stand greater pain than the ordinary male. The girls also pointed out that women were always the inspiration of famous male poets, artists and musicians, and that they are behind all the great things that men do. All three representatives of the affirmative argued along these lines, and almost entirely on psychology, sociology and all the science they could think of.

On the other hand, the men's speeches were not quite so serious as those made by the girls, but contained no little humour and seemed to attain their end better. They argued that it is woman's nature to be weak and that it is impossible for her to change herself. This is positively shown in the way she acts, dresses and paints her face, and that although women may inspire many men's actions, this does not require any strength, and it is the man who executes these things. They declared that the only function of woman in the world is to be loved, so it would be better for them to remain weak so that they may be loved the more.

After the debate there was a dance which lasted till about midnight and which was much enjoyed by the members of the two clubs.

The evening was declared in every way a great success, the attendance especially being very satisfactory. However, the executive noted that many of the members of the Cercle Francais who attended have not paid their fees, and they feared that some of these were attracted by other items on the programme rather than by the debate.

R.V.C. DEBATERS WILL MEET QUEEN'S

Three Debates To Take Place On Saturday

Next Saturday the Women's Inter-Collegiate Debates will be held at McGill, Queen's and Varsity.

It was decided earlier in the season that the best plan would be to have four debates chosen from each college, two of which would comprise a team. It was also decided that the three debates should take place in the three colleges on the same date, and that all would debate on the same subject, i.e., "Are trade Unions beneficial to society."

Miss Ester England and Miss Isabel Scriven will speak at the R. V. C. on Saturday, against one of the Queen's teams Miss Joan Gurd, and Miss Mabel Mac Sparrow will speak at Toronto, while the other teams from Varsity and Queen's will debate at Kingston.

The ability of the R. V. C. debaters is well known. Miss Gurd who is president of the Undergraduate Society, took part in the debates last year at Kingston, when the R. V. C. carried off the honors.

Miss England took a prominent part in managing the R. V. C. skit in last year's Theatre Night, she has also spoken frequently in inter-class debates.

Bloss Scriven and Miss Mac Sparrow brought renown to their class last term in the public speaking contest and also in the inter-year debates.

This is the first year that Toronto has belonged to the Women's Inter-Collegiate Debating Society and much is expected of them. A large audience has been expected to spur the speakers on to victory, on Saturday Nov. 22, in the R. V. C. Assembly Hall at 8:15.

DR. RITCHIE TO SPEAK ON PHILOSOPHY

Noted Lecturer Will Appear Before Philosophical Society

THURSDAY NEXT

Large Gatherings Anticipated At Opening Meeting of Club

Principal D. L. Ritchie, D. D., of the Congregational College will be the speaker at the first meeting of the Philosophical Club which will take place on Thursday Evening, November 20th, at 8 o'clock in Strathcona Hall.

His subject is "The Relationship of Philosophy and Theology" and will undoubtedly prove one of interest to all Students of Philosophy or Theology and to students of other departments as well. A lively discussion is also assured.

This is in keeping with an unwritten ruling of the club adopted last session for a limited series of discussions on the relationship of the various sciences to Philosophy. One of the series was held last year when Dr. Walters of the Department of Modern Languages gave a most entertaining and instructive address on Philosophy and Literature.

The Club is fortunate in being able to secure an authority like Dr. Ritchie on this pertinent subject Philosophy and Theology. Dr. Ritchie from his extensive knowledge of both Philosophy and Theology will be able to deal comprehensively with each in the light of the other.

Dr. Ritchie furthermore has a great reputation as an orator and the executive are sure that the evening could not be more profitably spent than at the Philosophical on Thursday.

GOVERNMENT IS DEFIED BY HON. E. FORSEY

Opposition Member Explodes Waterways Fallacy

RATIONAL CLUB Government Leaders Barely Escapes Riot in Regina

The fallacious ideas underlying the St. Lawrence deep waterways project was outlined at noon yesterday at the weekly luncheon of the Rational Club held at its headquarters on St. Catherine Street West, when the Hon. Eugene Forsey of the Rational Party delivered a most illuminating address on "The Deep Waterways Project—Its Significance."

"Back of the project is American capital, and back of that capital is the questionable handling that will be made of it by many members of the Dominion house," the Hon. Mr. Forsey declared. "Much as I regret to reveal the ignoble party tactics of the Government I feel, however, that it is my duty as a member of the Rational Party to reveal all that lies behind this bill," the speaker stated.

Briefly he traced the history of the project and pointed to the terrible effect it would have upon eastern interests. "The Government realizes the feeling in the west in regard to its coal legislation and now wishes to cater to the western section of Canada at the expense of the east," Mr. Forsey said.

"Not only is western Canada against the atrocious legislation planned, but the eastern United States are also anxious to see the bill fall through. With that in view two tried experts are coming to the next session of Parliament to speak against this measure which will in itself not only wipe out Vancouver as a grain exporting center but would also prove exceedingly detrimental to the harbour of Montreal."

Quoting Henry Ford's interview with the Montreal Star in which he declared that if it were not for her port Montreal would have no future whatever, Mr. Forsey showed that this legislation threatened to eliminate the local port and ruin eastern interests.

"I understand that the Government leaders have gone West, and that is where they should have gone long ago," Mr. Forsey concluded, amid loud laughter and prolonged applause.

Amongst those who sat at the head table were the Right Honourable Bert Wells, the Hon. Jack Spector, the Hon. Mr. Schwisberg, the Hon. L. Edel, the Hon. Mr. Kelloway and a host of other notables.

In moving the vote of thanks Robert de Wiscrack, who is contesting the seat in the coming election in Abitibi, pointed to Mr. Forsey's splendid career as a statesman and his unstained record in the services of the Dominion. The speaker was accorded a tremendous ovation at the conclusion of the meeting.

OPPOSITION REPLIES

"Utter nonsense" declared the Rt. Hon. Bert Wells Rational Party leader to a Daily reporter last night commenting on the reports from Winnipeg and Victoria of the successful meetings held held out West in the interests of the Government.

"Journalistic chatter. A disgrace on the ethics of journalism," the Hon. Mr. Schwisberg declared commenting on the same reports. "I am firmly convinced that the descriptions of the two meetings held in Winnipeg and Victoria are mere bombast."

The Opposition leader and his party arrived Monday night from Northern Quebec following a whirlwind campaign in the Abitibi district. As the train pulled in at the Bonaventure Station a large crowd met them and prolonged cheering greeted the statesmen as they came aboard.

The Prime Minister refused to be interviewed on the matter when the train reached Winnipeg.

LEOPOLD AND LOEB TEACH MATHS. AND ENGLISH IN JAIL

Nathan Leopold, serving life in the state prison here for his share in the murder of Robert Franko, is now a professor of English on the prison faculty.

Next week Richard Loeb, partner in the crime, will also become a member of the faculty and act as teacher in arithmetic.

The teaching will not conflict with their regular work in the prison factories. Warden Whitman stated in announcing the step, Leopold gives two hours a night to prisoners interested in acquiring a better knowledge of the English language. Loeb also will devote two hours a night to his class.

For their first time since the mill-litonaire youths, entered jail, two months ago, they met and talked yesterday. It was during the holiday movie performance—Armistice Day is a local holiday in Illinois—and they took advantage of the milling ground announcing the step. Leopold gives to meet and chat.

PROBLEMS IN IRELAND OF RECENT YEARS

Rise Of Sinn Fein And Boundary Disputes

HISTORICAL CLUB Discussion Held on One of The Greatest Present-day Questions

The troubled history of Ireland in recent years was reviewed and discussed at last night's meeting of the Historical Club, when papers dealing with the Rise of Sinn Fein and with the present Boundary Question were delivered by F. M. Godine and E. C. Knowles respectively, at the home of J. T. Aikman, Outremont.

Having briefly dealt with earlier Irish organizations, the United Irishmen founded in Ulster, the White Boys, the Young Ireland movement and the Fenian movement, Godine came to a consideration of the origin and growth of the great Sinn Fein organization, the programme of which had originally for its keynote the idea of abstention. Griffith one of the leaders argued that they would reach their goal through policy of self-development, and until after 1915 he would go no further than a claim for independence under a dual crown. By 1911 Redmond's supporters held the balance of power in the British parliament and the passage of Home Rule seemed probable.

The speaker then told of the Gun-running in Ulster and the serious issues arising out of the approach of Home Rule. He reviewed the stirring events which were happening in Ireland just before the war, at Larne pier, at Howth, at Bachelor's Walk, and at the Curragh Camp. He showed why enthusiasm in Ireland over Britain's participation in the Great War soon died down, and described the incidents leading up to the rebellion of Easter 1916, as a result of which Padraic Pearce and the other leaders of the rising were summarily executed.

out of their special car the "Rational."

To the assembled crowd the Hon. Mr. Kelloway threw out a brief message of hope as the leaders were carried off to address various meetings throughout the city. "That bill shall not pass—it must not," he firmly declared.

REGINA OBJECTS (Regina) Sask. Nov. 19—(Special)

—A riot was barely avoided here today when a large parade of unemployed was dispersed by policemen before any serious damage could be done. The men here who are out of work met the special train of the Government leaders who are on their way back east after a flying visit to this section of Canada and accorded a fitting reception for the members of the legislature. When the Rt.-Hon. J. G. Glasco, Prime Minister, who is himself to pilot the deep waterways bill at the parliament session Saturday came on the platform of the train accompanied by the Minister of Finance painted conditions in cry of "We want work" greeted him.

In smooth empty terms the Minister of Finance painted conditions in Canada, hinted at better times, and tried to win the crowd over by a sheer display of oratory. He was heckled several times by several of the men who shouted "We want food—not talk," and both leaders were forced to beat a retreat as a shower of stones came in and smashed several of the windows of the car. The train withdrew from Regina a few minutes later, while police disbanded the crowd.

The Prime Minister refused to be interviewed on the matter when the train reached Winnipeg.

MONTREAL WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1924

IMAGINATION

In a recent magazine article a prominent writer issued a warning to young and enthusiastic students against the easy road of study. That caution is a pertinent criticism of our contemporary educational system. Have the rush of classes, sports and the multitudinous activities in the life of the college man stifled imagination and original thought? The present day tendency seems to be in that direction.

For the individual who aspires to a high position in any endeavour, three essentials are required: power of invention, power of expression, and power of imagination. The extent of his contribution to humanity depends on the degree in which he possesses these characteristics. Invention has been described as the fortunate discovery of beauty, and the search for this is rewarded by a discovery of value. But without imagination the inspirations can neither be prolonged nor nourished. The second essential, expression, is the ability to provide a suitable setting for the fleeting ideas of invention. But these two alone are too cold and intellectual to allow any germ of beauty to grow and flourish. Imagination then is the ability to see whole truths which lie beneath the surface. Psychologically speaking it is the name given to the faculty of reproducing copies of originals once felt. There are two kinds, called reproductive when the copies are original and productive when the elements are manipulated into new wholes. Ordinarily the creative faculty rarely finds expression. Lectures are given, notes are written, the easy road to study is taken; the student reads, memorizes, and then gives back what he has received. Imagination may be entirely lacking in the process and usually very little thought is expended. In common parlance, speed-reading, especially in high schools is the order of the day. The puzzle is to find the initiative and originality, the expression of the constructive instinct which should have been called forth from the student; requiring as it does less thinking on the part of teachers and little from students, the path of least resistance has been chosen.

Imagination is the motive power by means of which new things are created. The analogy of the airplane illustrates this. The invention is the idea; the expression is the design, technique and beauty of construction; the imagination is the horsepower which makes the machine rise in the air; in other words imagination is the ability to dare, to take risks successfully. It is seen in sport when perhaps one football team suddenly overpowers its stronger rival by means of new and daring plays. For similar reasons, there arise great statesmen. The greatest writers and musicians controlled their imagination till the hour was ripe for the stroke, and then allowed fancy to soar whithersoever it willed, giving the world those moments and works of unearthly beauty. It requires imagination to enjoy art as well as to produce it, and for that reason there is relatively little in America. The response to art is play but it is an inventive play. It cannot be looked at or listened to; it must be felt.

No more then need be said of the value of productive imagery. All invention and thinking depends on this power of rearranging the old into the new. It is one of the most precious abilities of humanity, and as such should be fostered by every means at our command. Progress in science is largely due to provisional hypothesis, constructed by imagination. Our policy of ignoring and repressing it is suicidal. "One of the greatest dangers of the present customs in education is that constructive and creative imagination will be killed in the demand for the reproductive." This quotation from a prominent psychologist only emphasizes the fact that upon the fertility of the imaginative powers man must depend for all suggestions for progress. The college should be the place of development and guidance. But unfortunately we find there, as elsewhere, an easier, more definite circle or slough of stagnation. As Emerson said, "the man without imagination is like the observatory without a telescope."

CONDENSED COMMENT

Women are the weaker sex according to the results of the debate held last night by the Societe Francaise and Cercle Francais Clubs. There was a time when conclusions on that subject appeared so obvious that it was not considered fit for debating now a disputative question may or may not indicate that the so-called stronger sex is losing ground, and that a time will come when the world will recognize a complete revolution in the application of the terms "stronger," and "weaker." It must be admitted, however, by many who attended last night's fuction, that they accepted the decision of the judges with somewhat relieved feelings.

CLASS BASKETBALL WILL BEGIN SOON

Representatives To Meet On Thursday Afternoon

The Freshman-Sophomore basketball league will be begun within two weeks from now and a meeting of the basketball representatives from every freshman and sophomore class will be held on Thursday night at the Reading room of the Union at 5 o'clock. All representatives have been asked to be present as the schedule will be drawn up and Mr. Van Wagner will allot the practice hours at the same time.

This league has been started each year after the men have been picked for the college tennis. The idea is to give those players, not on the team a chance to play basketball through the winter and to develop material for future years. The league is divided into two sections, the freshmen classes playing a round robin in one, while the sophomore classes play in the second section. The winners of the two schedules then play off for the right to meet the champions of the upper-class division.

Often men who are not picked for the college teams will show up well in the inter-class league and the coaches are on the lookout for such men as these. The rules governing the eligibility are quite simple. No man playing on a college team, or a Montreal team other than McGill may play on his class team. Also no man having won a M for Basketball is eligible.

MEN BECOME ADDICTS OF THE MARCEL WAVE

And curls to be encephalic a necessity to manly beauty? What else could make men abandon pomades, brilliantines, staccos and other perumed hair dressings of which fashioned made him such a slave in the past? For today, men have appointments for marcel, round curls and permanent waves, according to information from proprietors of Bloomington beauty shops. One shop is even considering establishing a separate booth for the men, to take care of the numerous calls received.

Some of the men are still sensitive about this new idea as may be shown by one University male. He appeared at the door of a beauty parlor recently asking for a marcel appointment at the earliest possible date. The date was set for the following Monday but the student just didn't show up—neither did he pay for the skipped appointment.

Every beauty shop in Bloomington has had calls from men for beauty work. Many shops happen to be for women only and for that reason never have been able to take the calls they received. Requests include everything from facials to manicures, treatments, hair singeing and hair including eyebrow plucking, scalp curling. No wonder there is such a congestion in the beauty shops, when the male of the species commences pluming himself.

AMERICAN CLUB WILL HOLD SMOKER

Boxing and Wrestling Bouts And Other Entertainment

The McGill American Club will hold a Smoker on Thursday Nov. 20th at 8 o'clock in the Union; the room opposite the Cafeteria will be used. The executive have gone to considerable trouble to insure success for the affair. The services of the best boxers and wrestlers that could be obtained in the University have been secured and the bouts should prove interesting and exciting. Music will be provided by the Club orchestra which though recently organized this year is reported to be musical to the Nth degree. It makes its initial appearance tomorrow night. Members have been reminded that the Annual Thanksgiving Banquet is to be held on Nov. 27th, in the Oak Room of the Windsor Hotel. The fact that after the Banquet, dancing may be enjoyed will prove an extra inducement. This new addition to the general programme has been made possible by the Women's American Club of Montreal. The Banquet is the main function of the Club and all Americans who can possibly attend have been urged to do so.

Tickets may be secured from A. K. K. Koff of Med. '28 verse in Dentistry and Desrosiers in Art.

go through the building yesterday and see just what kind of work is going on in that district of the city.

In one room there was a sewing class of young girls, seated around a large table with their work spread before them. All the ladies present were very much interested in this work, and were loud in their praise of the girls and their instructors.

In another room, a dentist's clinic was being held. These clinics are held at regular hours, so that the children may come and have their teeth inspected and attended to. One small girl was just going to have two teeth removed yesterday, but it did not seem to worry her in the least. The Superintendent explained that all the children had perfect faith in the young doctor in charge of the clinic, as he often joined them in their games and always treated them as his friends. The children are certainly fortunate in having such a fine doctor to help them and he is undoubtedly doing good work amongst these little boys and girls.

The Library is another very fine part of the institution. Books of all kinds are arranged round the walls of the room, and the children can come and borrow them for a certain length of time as in the McGill Library. The Superintendent said that the most popular books were Henry's and those about "Tom Swift." These he said, had been read time and time again by different children, although there is quite a large collection of books in store, others are always needed, and the Settlement has said it would be pleased to receive additions to their Library at any time, especially if the books are suitable for young children.

The work being done by this institution is indeed very creditable, and McGill students would do very well to take an interest in the University Settlement and its activities.

McCOMBE TWINS HAVE DOG TEAM

To Enter Eastern International Dog Derby

McGill will be unofficially represented in a new branch of athletics this winter. Johnny and Bob McCombe have entered a team of Alaskan huskies in the Eastern International Dog Derby which is to be held at Quebec City. It is expected that this race of 120 miles will end in a victory for the McCombe twins. Two of the dogs ran in a 1600-mile endurance race in Alaska last winter. "Dan Joe," the present leader of the team, showed no ill effects of his long drive, and consequently 120 miles will bother him little. The other three dogs are new at the game, but under the efficient training of Johnny and Bob can be depended upon to show great form. The youngest and smallest of the team is our own mascot "Jerry" who has been with Shag's men all fall.

The dogs are out at Dorval where they have been kept in training. Both boys are good drivers, and can be depended upon to instill their own spirit into the team. They will be a team to beat for the championship. McGill students will be backing "Jerry" and his teammates through to the end of the race.

FENCING COMPETITION FOR FRESHMEN SOON

A very successful fencing practice was held yesterday afternoon in the Strathcona Hall at which were present about 35 participants. Under the tutelage of Prof. Raimond the new men were taught a few of the finer points of the game, and appear to be getting on remarkably well. The older members spent the time in practice among themselves, and in developing some new points.

All Freshmen with any ability to fence and who have been attending fencing practices are reminded of the Freshmen competition which is to take place at the end of this month in conjunction with the Tyro meet. All those desiring to compete in Arts kindly hand their names to G. J. Pickleman, the Arts Fencing representative, at the earliest opportunity.

Fencers have also been reminded of their fees which are now due and which should be paid to C. H. Kneebone.

DIVORCE CASE TAKES INTEREST OF LAW '27

University students are generally beleaguered by people on the outside to be a restless group, and desiring something new and original at short intervals to relieve the monotony of uninteresting lectures. To satisfy a similar desire Law '27 hit upon a novel plan on Tuesday morning, November 18.

From an ordinary lecture room, the place was suddenly transformed into a court room filled with clerks, constables, lawyers, and King's Counsels and even judges were to be seen in woolly manes.

Several cases were brought forward in which much interest was taken, but when a divorce case was put before the judge, the crowd was on fire with excitement. Evidence on both sides was brought up and thoroughly discussed but the decision was postponed until Thursday morning at 10 A. M. The court adjourned and then reverted to class, following its usual routine of taking lectures.

Law '27 still has a long way to go so that it cannot be prophesied what they will do before they get the coveted sheepskin, to satisfy that desire for something new.

IN KANSAS STATE COLLEGE

Is the number of cake-eaters increasing, if so does it bear any definite relationship to the consumption of pie? That is the question that the management of the college cafeteria is asking, in trying to solve the problem of why, even though the price of pie has been reduced two cents per piece, the students who patronize the college cafeteria, somehow only eat pies per day in place of the 30 that has been the average required during former years.

Nevertheless, during the five years that Miss Palmer has been pastry cook for the college cafeteria, she has baked more than 30,000 pies. Butter, scotch and chocolate pie are the favorite kinds, and apple and cherry are next choice. Summer school students eat more pie than do regular students.

THE CAPITOL

Mr. Wright of Montreal Star Is Speaker

The Staff of the "Daily" is holding an important meeting this evening in the Union at 7.45 o'clock. All students who are working on the paper have been asked to attend. The evening offers a splendid opportunity of increasing knowledge of newspaper work. This is especially so in the case of reporters who are new to the Daily as much valuable advice may be obtained during the evening.

Mr. Wright, an Editorial writer of the Montreal Daily Star has consented to address the Staff. The speaker is well known as a newspaper authority in the city and he is expected to give some account of his experiences and policy in newspaper work.

As the staff of the "Daily" is now completed for the term, all the members have been asked to make a special effort to attend the meeting in order that it may be a complete success. Last year several similar meetings were held and proved to be of great value to the staff. This year it is intended to have several evenings of this kind during the season.

This evening there will be an added attraction in the form of refreshments which will be served at the end of the meeting.

DEMOCRATIC SENIORS

Not to be outside by the Freshman class the Seniors at the University of Syracuse have adopted a novel type of headwear. It is a navy blue crushable type of hat with an orange band around it.

The sophomores class at New York University proved their superiority over the freshmen, when a handful of second year men broke up a frosh hazing party. The time honored custom of the usual hazing procedure seems to have been reversed on this occasion and the frosh have assumed the initiative, rather than wait to be shown the intimate details of a "hazing exercise."

COLLEGE STANDARDS OF TO-DAY ARE HIGH

That the college man of today takes athletics, football in particular, more sanely than in his time, was the opinion of Booth Tarkington, '93, when interviewed during his recent visit to Princeton. The great American author was a leader in undergraduate life at Princeton, having been prominent in changing the Triangle Club to its present form. Speaking of scholastic conditions, he said, "I think we had a very easy time compared to what is demanded of the students today."

In former days, according to Mr. Tarkington, any one would get up in the crowd and lead a cheer, or the fans would call for some one. "The cheering is about as noisy now, but it was more spontaneous before. We yelled when we wanted to and when the game made us, whereas the yelling is done now when the leaders specify." "It is harder to stay in college than it used to be," he continued, turning to the other side of college life. "The curriculum is quite different and you have to be more of a scholar now. I think most alumni of my time are very glad to have been here when they were, and would have little hope of staying here under the present standards."

DAD WONDERS HOW!

The University of Michigan is conducting an investigation among the students to see how much the average Michigan man spends while in college.

A preacher recently urged everyone to "stand upon his own feet." This exhortation was doubtlessly caused by riding in the subway.

Another preacher is reputed to have made off with the church funds. He was the good shepherd of his flock he took lambs into his fold and fleeced them.

PROBLEMS IN IRELAND OF RECENT YEARS

executed and the Irish were aroused as never before Sinn Fein was re-

AS UNCLE SAM SEES CANADA

(By Arthur Stringer)

Omnia mutantur, as they used to say on the Tiber. When I went from Canada to Oxford, a good many years ago, my professor of Greek asked me how I got along on English roast mutton after so many winters of whale-blubber. Last spring, when I came from Canada to the States, every second New Yorker looked at me earnestly in the eye and asked me what brand of Scotch I'd brought down with me.

And that set me thinking. It reminded me how little my native country was understood on this side of the line. For I loved my home, as appropriately called the Land of the Beaver, for the simple reason that the Canadian, like the beaver, has to go about damming that home a bit before he considers it fit to live in. So, being of an investigative turn of mind, I occupied my idle days—for I'm only an author and have, of course, practically nothing to do-trying to get some general idea of Uncle Sam's general estimate of Johnnie Canuck.

Canada, I found, was a large body of snow completely surrounded by rum-runners. It grows the hardest wheat and the hardest liquor to be found on the continent. Along the Bay of Fundy it has the highest tides and along the St. Lawrence it has the highest birth-rate in the world. But it's so cold that the nouveau riche of Quebec still build their country places out of ice-blocks. The Four Hundred of Montreal wear earmuffs, and the humble habitan grows his favourite muskmelons with fur on to keep them from freezing. It is a country made up of forests that are forever being burned down and politicians that are forever being shown up; of Mounted Police who are forever tracking escaped murderers into the wastes of the Arctic; of lovely young ladies who wear bear-skin rompers without being the least bit camera-shy and who do their travelling (since there seem to be no railways), behind a dog-team of faithful huskies; of octogenarian old Hudson Bay factors who exchange beads for rabbit-skins and grow their own chest-protectors by maintaining a facade of chin-whiskers wherein even the shiest of swamp-thrushes could safely nest; of agile old ladies who frolic up and down the Chateau Frontenac Terrace on skis and snowshoes; of an organization known as the C. P. R. which originally built the Canadian Rockies and which can comfortably carry you into the Great Open Spaces where a Man, oddly enough, is always a Man, and where you can buy a dehydrated elk-head for eighteen dollars or hook a twenty-pound hock-bass off the hotel-dock; of a humorist known as Old Steve Leacock, who pokes you in the ribs with one hand while he drops his bitter pill of political economy down your throat with the other; and of an optimist named Steffanson, who fights with the polar ice-bear and finds them friendlier than the Royal Poinelana on a Sunday in February.

It is a land that claims a first mortgage on the Poie yet cut Kipling dead because he called it "Our lady of the Snows," a land where it is as impolite to breathe a word about winter temperatures as it is to speak of the "earthquake" in San Francisco. It is a land where the visiting sportsman pursues the lordly moose through the unfilled pulpwoods and at the same time a land where you can't throw a snow-bail without hitting a well-known poet. It is a land where the rapids tumble joyously and the mining-stocks do the same, only with less merriment; a land where they make McLaren's cheese and Walker's Imperial, and the worst shoes and the best maple syrup in the world; where they say "Choos-day" for Tuesday and go gurling on their frozen rivers, and where they refuse to sell ice-cream on Sunday; and although they claim a high degree of civilization they politely decapitate each other at a game called Lacrosse and let the Daughters of the Empire burn Hearst in effigy every time he raises the malling-price of Cosmopolitan. It's a land of modest workers who discover insulin and distill Canadian Club and perfect helium gas and sell polished steers-horns to the tourists. It's a land of briar pipes and tilted Stetsons and big men, a land of wonderful scenery and weird hotels, a land of far too many railways and at the same time not half enough; a land that plays its own game in its own way, and, emulating the lady who announced she wasn't much in a ball-room but hell in a hack, professes to be work-beater at baseball, but quietly acknowledges it has proved itself the very best devil at hockey. It's a broad-minded melting-pot where the U. E. Loyalist hobnobs with the New England absconder, and where Bluenose is a brother to the Blonde Eskimo; where titles are officially forbidden and frowned on as the natives fall over one another in the scramble to get one. It's a land where the thermometer drops to 20 degrees below zero but, as their southern neighbors say, "It's a dry cold and you don't feel it."

They export dried cod and import still other theatrical amusements. They sit through pictures and plays that travesty their own life, remembering, probably, that they are citizens of a country where men are still hanged for murder. They speak two languages, officially, but have the same high sign for intimating there's a bottle of the Real Stuff out under the car-seat. They have a sobering strain of Scotch in their make-up to balance the kind that isn't sobering, the true Caledonian strain that still cuts cornmeal for breakfast and believes in the Larger Catechism and keeps the Sabbath and everything else it can lay its hands on. They have no Sunday papers, but as soon as Kirk is out they are down at the depot ready to pay double-price for the Sabbathal bundle of imported comics and rotogravure sections showing the bathing beauties at Daytona Beach and the movie queens so courageously defying California's actinic rays and the Mann Act. Along the St. Lawrence River they have the slimmest farms and the largest families of any place in America. Along the Detroit River they have the fastest motor-boats and the wealthiest bootleggers in the world. They have a Governor-General whose chief duty is to dine off gold-plate and lay corner-stones and put on knee-pants when he takes down the shutters and opens Parliament. They are a nation of music-lovers and have a national anthem that can be sung by only one man out of ten. And up in their Queen City they have a Mendelssohn Choir that can out-sing anything in the New World, but they get even, when no one is looking, by broadcasting the bagpipes over the radio!—Manitoba.

The proposals for the decoration of the Ball Room are original and should be very effective.

As yet very few designs for the Programme have been handed in and the Committee begs to impress the important and value of the competition which is being held in this connection. There are rumors of several very attractive sketches being in process of completion. These should be handed in during the course of the day.

A very short interval remains before the final date of this attractive dance and the Committee is sparing no effort to make it a great success.

THE BATTLE OF THE CLOCKS

(Respectfully dedicated to the Union House Committee)

Oh, the Union House clocks are remarkable clocks. With their ticks and their ticks. And their ticks and their ticks. They look really quite fair. Yes, remarkably good. With their metal and glass and nice polished wood. But, alas, in full truth, they don't keep the time. And profit would be made if two sold for a dime.

Oh, the Union House clocks, those remarkable things! The hands go around with no dunge or no dunge. They are driving us crazy, they are driving us mad. Though as a good joke they are really not bad. For you leave for a lecture at quarter past two. And arrive for a class while the prof's at his stew. Or a quarter to nine you dash madly away. To find the professor gone home for the day.

Oh, the Union House clocks are remarkable clocks. With their ticks and their ticks. And their ticks and their ticks. They fight the day through over nothing at all. For the cafe contraption disagrees with the hall. And quarrel continues—just list to the rest. For both disagree with the watch in my vest. Oh when, yes, oh when, will the clocks cease their war? When they are put out of misery. Not a moment before. —D. Mentel.

IN THE GOOD OLD DAYS

Perhaps Freshmen of Harvard University, who voted so overwhelmingly in favor of hazing recently would not have been as whole-hearted in their support of the custom if they had been the entering class in 1860. Newspapers of the time are filled with accounts of the outrages committed against the newcomers. Hazing parties reached a climax in November, 1860, when eight Sophomores were expelled for participation in one affair.

The whole affair started when some Freshmen gave an insult, real or fancied, to a second year man. The Sophomores demanded an immediate written apology, which the lower classmen refused to give. The next day, as the same Freshman was walking down Hoiyoke Street with a classmate, a large number of masked Sophomores attacked him and were just about to carry him off to an unknown fate, when his companion drew a pistol and fired. Fortunately it was loaded with a blank cartridge, so there were no casualties in the ranks of the Sophomores, but the masked enemies were completely routed.

Freshman Goes Before Faculty.

Unfortunately one of the Cambridge constables happened to witness the scene, so he arrested the Freshman for attempted manslaughter, with characteristic injustice, and took him before a faculty meeting which was then in progress. From the Freshman the faculty learned of a whole series of outrages. One of the first year men had been tied up in a sack, ducked five times in the Charles, and left lying on the bank of the river, still tied in the sack. When released he was almost dead from exposure. The Freshman also informed the faculty that another classmate of his was held prisoner in the room of a Sophomore.

A committee of faculty members was formed to call on the Sophomore jaieters and demand the release of the unfortunate prisoner, but they found the jailers obdurate and could not make them open the door. At last the President of the College himself was called, and the second year men, awed into submission by this august symbol of authority, released their prisoner.

The incarcerated Freshman took the affair as a joke, but the faculty didn't, and the eight Sophomores who had resisted the authorities were expelled without more ado. Thus "porcuted" by the faculty, the second year men became heroes in the undergraduate eye, and were given a magnificent send-off when they left.

An express wagon was secured, and eighty pairs of sturdy Sophomore arms drew the eight "martyrs" through the streets of Cambridge. There were cheers for the men who had been expelled and groans for the faculty. The Boston paper says that "the groans increased remarkably in volume as the procession passed the house of the President."

The students tried to get a hall in which to hold an indignation meeting, but were prevented by action of the faculty. They had to content themselves with sporadic and useless petitions of protest to the College Office and with decorating all the trees and fences about the yard with black cloth. Finally, in a last gasp of protest, a disgruntled Sophomore

STUDENTS OF TO-DAY AS SERIOUS AS EVER

A great deal is heard nowadays about the "flapper" and the "Coke eater in college" and sometimes it is feared that people think that it is this type which makes up the students body of to-day; but those who come into intimate contact with the students know them, as a whole, to be earnestly minded, that a good percentage of them make their way through college, wholly or in part and have no inclination to waste either time or money on foolishness. Sometimes it is feared that they do not get enough time for play and recreation. Young people of all student generation are the same at heart. The plaid now are larger, the colors more startling, the locks shorn but the same sturdy elements that have always made up the fibre of college boys and girls are still present and the camouflage of modern life cannot prevail against them.

CHINESE BOY PLAYS WITH SLIDE RULES.

Rudolf H. Ernst, Professor of English, at Columbia University, vouches for the following:

A few years ago a young Chinese entered a book store in Eugene and asked for a slide rule. No ordinary slide rule would do, he wanted a superior article. There were no super-slide rules in stock, but on consulting a catalogue the salesman discovered an extra special rule costing $20, and the young man ordered it.

Three weeks passed, and the youth again entered the store. He wanted another slide rule—a better one. The catalogue revealed the possibility of purchasing one for $25. With obvious gusto the young man ordered one of these. Although the clerk was interested he asked no questions.

About a month later, however, when passing a sorority house he saw the young man of the many slide rules washing dishes in the kitchen. His curiosity got the better of him, and he stopped to speak to him. The young man, he found, had purchased the slide rule for the mere pleasure of handling it. Then, when he received a letter from China saying that his brother, who also was interested in mathematics, was very ill, what but a slide rule would revive his spirits? The second instrument was mailed to the Far East.

MANDOLIN CLUB HAS SUCCESSFUL MEETING

First Year Men Are In Majority To Date

A very successful practice of the Mandolin Club was held last evening at Mr. Peate's, under the instruction of Mr. Kent. So far the results at the practices point to a very successful year for the club. Besides the mandolins and banjos, a violinist, a saxophone, and a pianist, were present. So far, it has been mostly first year men who have been present, but it is expected that last year's men will be turning out from now on, and the club is sure to go over with a bang. If the music progresses favourably in the next few weeks, it is practically certain that a McGill night will be held at the Palace Theatre at which selections will be rendered by the players and this fact is giving added impetus to their efforts.

On the whole the indications point to a very successful season.
